DETAILED TABLE OF CONTENTS

Foreword................................................................. vii
Acknowledgements.......................................................... ix
Table of contents............................................................ xi
Authors and editors............................................................... xv

Introduction. Steps for integrity in public contracts
Gabriella M. RACCA and Christopher B. YUKINS................................. 1

Applying OECD public procurement principles
Paulo MAGINA and Jeremy MCCRARY ........................................ 11
1. Why Focus on Public Procurement: Background .................. 11
2. Six lessons learnt from the OECD Public Procurement Reviews ....... 12
3. Reforming the Whole Procurement Cycle ...................... 14
4. A Strategic Role for Public Procurement ...................... 16
   Innovation as an Example .................................................. 16
   Data ............................................................................. 17
   Capacity ......................................................................... 18
5. Conclusion........................................................................... 18

Part I. Corruption as a Violation of Fundamental Rights

Chapter 1. Corruption as a violation of fundamental rights:
reputation risk as a deterrent against the lack of loyalty
Gabriella M. RACCA and Roberto CAVALLO PERIN ....................... 23
1. Introduction ............................................................................. 23
2. The lack of integrity as a violation of fundamental rights .......... 24
   2.1. Social, political, economic solidarity .............................. 27
   2.2. Securing Fundamental Rights in the EU ....................... 31
3. The problem of legal rules, effectiveness and rapid obsolescence.
   The instruments of transparency and accountability. The need for fine-tuned strategies for fighting collusion and corruption ...... 34
   3.1. The incentives for compliance in the public sector .............. 36
   3.2. The incentives for compliance in the private sector ............. 39
4. Public oversight, “social witness” experience for the evidence of the quality of public spending ......................... 42
5. New social sanctions for the infringement of public loyalty to fundamental rights: a violation of social solidarity.
   Temporary exclusion from full social membership ...................... 46

Chapter 2. An emblematic case: corruption as an illicit secondary consideration in public procurement in Italy
Antonio ROMANO-TASSONE ................................................................. 49
1. Introduction .................................................................................49
2. The illicit “secondary” considerations pursued through public procurement ........................................ 49
3. The evolution towards the preference of apparently automatic award systems ......................................... 50
4. The risks of automatic (objective) awards ....................................51
5. The overcoming of illicit secondary considerations ......................51

Chapter 3. Perspectives on fighting corruption in public contracts in Italy
Francesco MANGANARO ................................................................. 53
1. Corruption and administration .................................................. 53
2. Corruption in Italy ..................................................................... 54
3. The report on Italy of the Group of States against Corruption (GRECO) ....................................................... 56
4. Corruption in public procurement ............................................... 58
5. For an administrative law on anticorruption .......................... 60

Chapter 4. The Italian efforts on anti-corruption
Bernardo Giorgio MATTARELLA ..................................................... 61
1. The problem of corruption in the Italian administrative law .... 61
2. The prevention of corruption in the Italian public administration through the recent law ........................... 63

Chapter 5. Fighting corruption in public procurement: the case of Romania
Bogdana NEAMTU and Dacian C. DRAGOS ...................................... 69
1. Introduction ................................................................................69
2. An overview of corruption in public procurement in Romania ... 70
   2.1. Corruption as a systemic problem in the CEE countries and Romania .................................................... 70
2.2. Corruption in public procurement in Romania:
   Areas of concern .................................................................... 73

BRUYLANT
3. Conflicts of interest as a specific instance of corruption in public procurement in Romania .................. 79
  3.1. Assessment of the problem .......................................................... 79
  3.2. Legal framework and its effectiveness .......................................... 80
    3.2.1. Applicable national legal acts ............................................. 81
    3.2.2. Definition of conflicts of interest ....................................... 82
    3.2.3. Specific situations leading to conflicts of interest under the national legislation ............................... 83
      Situations leading to conflicts of interest for persons working for the contracting authority .................. 84
      Situations leading to conflicts of interest for economic operators ............................................... 85
    3.2.4. Strategies for identification and avoidance of conflicts of interest ............................................. 86
      Obligations of the contracting authorities ................................................ 86
      Obligations of the economic operators ............................................... 87
    3.2.5. Sanctions/remedies in case of the existence of conflicts of interest ........................................... 87
      Replacement of the members of the evaluation commission and of the hired experts ....................... 88
      Exclusion of economic operators from the tender ................................................ 89
      Ineffectiveness/Annulment of the public procurement contract ................................................. 89
  3.3. Recent developments: Enhancing the role of ANI in identifying and preventing conflicts of interest in public procurement .................................................. 90

4. Transparency as a precondition for integrity in public procurement: some evidence from Romania ................. 91
  4.1. Legal framework in place .......................................................... 92
  4.2. Faking transparency through e-procurement and internet publicity? ............................................... 93
  4.3. Recent developments: Transparency through open data ............................................................ 98

5. Instead of conclusions: What strategies should the Romanian government promote in order to fight more effectively against corruption in public procurement? .................................................. 98
Chapter 6. The criminal repression of corruption in public procurement of Tunisia

Ridha JENAYAH................................. 101

1. Introduction .......................................................... 101
2. Specificities of criminal law for procurement contracts .......... 102
   2.1. Administrative and criminal liability in the field of government procurement ........................................... 102
3. Weaknesses of the system of proceedings .......................... 104
   3.1. The need to improve the means of detection of corruption ........................................................................ 104
   3.2. The need to extend the investigative powers of the investigating authorities ............................................ 106
4. The adaptation of the criminal repression of fraud to public procurement ..................................................... 108
   4.2. The consolidation of the traditional penal system ........ 111
5. Conclusion................................................................................... 113

Part II. Corruption in the Award Phase

Chapter 1. Integrity challenges in the EU and U.S. procurement systems

Daniel I. GORDON and Gabriella M. RACCA................................. 117

1. The different scope of public procurement rules in the EU and the U.S. and the relevance of integrity .......... 117
2. Flexibility in the choice of procedures in the new EU procurement directive and in the U.S. federal procurement system ................................................................. 122
3. EU objectivity vs. U.S. subjectivity in the award decision: integrity issues ....................................................... 124
   3.1. Criteria for qualitative selection of tenderers in the EU and past performance in the U.S. ......................... 125
   3.2. European objectivity vs. American subjectivity .......... 126
4. The U.S. experience in aggregation: risks to avoid in the EU ................................................................. 133
5. Integrity as the key to any procurement system: how to provide transparency and accountability ............. 138
6. Conclusions................................................................................... 144
Chapter 2. Regulating discretion in public procurement: an anti-corruption tool?
Paula Bordalo Faustino................................................................. 147
1. Setting the scene ................................................................. 147
2. Discussion .......................................................................... 149
3. Tentative conclusions ......................................................... 150

Part III. Corruption and Collusion in Public Contracts

Chapter 1. Demand aggregation and collusion prevention in public procurement
Gian Luigi Albano............................................................................. 155
1. Introduction ........................................................................... 155
2. The basic economic forces of collusion in public procurement ..................................................... 156
3. Demand aggregation and the risk of collusion .......................................................... 158
4. Lots and Competition ............................................................. 161
   4.1. The nature of the awarding mechanism ................................ 161
   4.2. From static competition to dynamic competition: award or participation limits? ............... 162
5. Demand aggregation and joint bidding .................................................. 163
6. The risk of collusion in Framework Agreements ............................................. 166
7. Concluding remarks ................................................................ 168

Chapter 2. Prevention and deterrence of bid rigging: a look from the new EU directive on public procurement
Albert Sánchez Graells ................................................................. 171
Introduction .................................................................................. 171
Part I ............................................................................................. 173
1. The Apparent Pervasiveness of Bid Rigging Despite Increased Enforcement Efforts ................. 173
2. Brief Economic Background .................................................. 173
3. Reflections of Economic Theory in Practice ................................................. 175
   3.1. Bid rigging in healthcare markets .................................... 176
   3.2. Bid rigging in public works markets ............................... 178
   3.3. Bid rigging in other markets .......................................... 180
4. Preliminary Conclusion ........................................................... 181
Part II ................................................................................................. 182

1. Tools to Prevent and Deter Bid Rigging in the New Public Procurement Directive ................................... 182

2. General measures: “collusion-conscious” (and pro-competitive) tender design ............................................ 184

3. In particular, the issue of division of contracts into lots and its impact on collusion.................................... 185

4. Exclusion of competition law infringers, and outline of a proposal for a fuller suspension and debarment system .......................................................... 191

Conclusions .......................................................................................... 197

Chapter 3. Contracting authorities’ inability to fight bid rigging in public procurement: reasons and remedies
Antonio López Míno and Patricia Valcárcel Fernández ......................................................... 199

1. Introduction ................................................................................199

2. Public Procurement as a Type of Regulation ........................................ 200

3. Applying Antitrust Law to Public Procurement ...............................202

4. The Spanish Case. Fight Against Bid Rigging Channeled Towards Competition Law ........................................ 203

5. Proposals to Combat Bid Rigging within the Procurement Procedure ........................................................................... 204

5.1. Contractual clauses to deter antitrust breaches in public procurement: general clauses and the non-collusion compromise .............................................. 205

5.1.1. Overall indicators of competition ...............................................205

5.1.2. Bidder’s commitment not to incur in collusive practices..................206

5.1.3. The placet of the General Court on the commitment: the PC-Ware judgement ......................................................... 207

5.2. Organic clauses. Participation of experts on Competition Law to support the exclusion of bid riggers ................................................................. 209

6. The Directive 2014/24/EU on Public Procurement: Contracting Authorities Are Prompted to Take the Leading Role Against Bid Rigging ........................................... 210

7. Conclusions ................................................................................... 213

BRUYLANT
Chapter 4. Debarment in public procurement: rationales and realization

_Erling JELMENG and Tina SØREIDE_................................................................. 215

1. Introduction ........................................................................................................ 215
2. EU procurement rules and self-cleaning......................................................... 216
3. Purpose and principles .................................................................................. 219
4. Criteria for efficient debarment and self-cleaning ......................................... 221
   4.1. External decision ....................................................................................... 221
   4.2. The length of the debarment period ....................................................... 222
   4.3. Self-cleaning and the debarment period .................................................. 223
   4.4. The self-cleaning initiatives .................................................................... 225
5. The scope for development of a coherent policy ......................................... 225
   5.1. The legal status of self-cleaning ............................................................. 226
   5.2. The graveness of the offence .................................................................. 228
   5.3. The policy space for improving the debarment legislation in light of self-cleaning ................................................................. 229
   5.4. Coordinated solutions preferred ............................................................. 231
6. Conclusion ........................................................................................................ 232

Chapter 5. Brief notes on bid rigging and price fixing in Poland

_Anna GORCZYNSKA_............................................................................................ 233

1. Introduction ........................................................................................................ 233
2. Competition rules in EU law .......................................................................... 234
3. Definition of bid rigging .................................................................................. 235
4. Forms of bid rigging .......................................................................................... 236
   4.1. Bid-rigging cartels between companies – the most common form is price fixing ................................................................. 237
   4.2. Bid-rigging agreements concluded between the contracting authority and one or more companies ................................................................. 239
5. Factors conducive to bid rigging ...................................................................... 240
6. Sanctions ........................................................................................................... 241
7. Conclusions ....................................................................................................... 242
Part IV. Contract Modifications and Corruption in the Execution Phase

Chapter 1. Material changes in contract management as symptoms of corruption: a comparison between EU and U.S. procurement systems

Gabriella M. Racca and Roberto Cavallo Perin .......................................................... 247

1. Fair competition in the selection and fair execution of the promised performance ................................................. 247
2. Material changes in the EU and the U.S. Procurement system ................................................................. 249
3. The limits to admitted changes and the respect of fair competition .............................................................. 255
4. Substantial modifications that require a new award procedure ................................................................. 263
5. The role of unsuccessful tenderers after the signing of the contract ......................................................... 266
6. Material amendments and Integrity Issues ................................................................................................. 271
7. Conclusions ................................................................................................................................................. 273

Chapter 2. The modification of public contracts: an obstacle to transparency and efficiency

Francisco J. Vázquez Matilla .......................................................................................... 275

1. Introduction ..................................................................................................................................................... 275
2. The justification for limitations on the ius variandi or power to change the contract and the need for fair procurement .................................................................................................................................................................................. 276
3. The case-law of Court of Justice of the European Union as impacting the right of contract modifications .................................................................................................................................................................................. 279
3.1. Introduction .................................................................................................................................................. 279
3.2. The Judgement of the CJEU 29 April 2004, Comission v CAS Succhi di Frutta S.p.A. ......................... 280
3.3. The Judgment of the CJEU of 19 June pressetext Nachrichtenagentur GmbH v Republik Österreich, APA-OTS Originaltext – Service GmbH, APA Austria Presse Agentur registrierte Genossenschaft mit beschränkter Haftung .................................................................................................................................................................................. 283
3.4. The judgement of 13 april 2010 Wall AG contra La ville de Francfort-sur-le-Main y Frankfurter Entsorgungs- und Service (FES) GmbH y Otros .................................................................................................................................................................................. 285
Chapter 3. Brief notes on modifications of public contracts in Italy

Paolo Lazzara

1. Introduction .................................................................................. 307
2. Italian regulation on modifications of public contracts between private autonomy and public interest ................................................................. 308
3. Admitted modifications of the public contracts in the Italian legal framework .............................................................................................. 311
4. Modifications in the execution of services and supplies public contracts ............................................................................................... 315

Part V. The Need for Professionalisation in the Procurement Market

Chapter 1. The importance of a professionally educated public procurement workforce: lessons learned from the U.S. experience

Peter T. McKeen ................................................................................... 319
1. Introduction .................................................................................. 319
2. The Public Procurement Workforce
   – A Pillar of the Procurement System .............................................. 320
   2.1. A growing appreciation for the central role of the procurement workforce .............................................................................................. 322
3. The Increasing Complexity of the Public Procurement Process Demands A Professionally Educated Workforce ............................................. 325
   3.1. Conflicting Goals ...................................................................... 330
4. Establishing A Professional Public Procurement Workforce ............................................................................................................................. 333
   4.1. The DAU/FAI Model ................................................................... 334
   4.2. Training versus Professional Education ....................................... 335

BRUYLANT
Detailed Table of Contents

4.3. Training and Principal Agent Model ........................................ 336
4.4. The University Model .......................................................... 337
4.5. University courses and the procurement professional .......... 338
5. Discretion in the Selection of Award Criteria and the Contract Award Process ................................................. 339
6. Conclusion .................................................................................. 341

Chapter 2. Front-line public servants, discretion and corruption
Andrée SADDY ........................................................................ 343
1. Introduction ............................................................................... 343
2. Public procurement ..................................................................... 344
3. Corruption .................................................................................. 345
4. Public servant in public procurement .......................................... 346
   4.1. Concept of Front-line public servants ................................... 347
   4.2. Front-line public servants as public policies makers ............. 349
   4.3. Front-line public servants enforcing rules ............................ 350
5. Relationship between bureaucracy, discretion and corruption exercised by front-line public servants in public procurement .................................................. 352
6. Conclusion .................................................................................. 354

Chapter 3. Integrity and efficiency in collaborative purchasing
Busher RAHMAN, Eugene S. SCHNEELER and Natalia WILSON .................................................. 357
Introduction ........................................................................................ 357
Part I ................................................................................................... 359
1. The idea of Codes of Conduct ....................................................... 359
2. Prevalence of Codes .................................................................... 364
3. The value of self-regulation .......................................................... 365
4. International comparisons .......................................................... 366
5. Implementation, enforcement and performance .......................... 367
Part II ................................................................................................. 368
1. GPO Code of Conduct in the US .................................................. 368
2. The structure of Providers and Suppliers in the US health care system .......................................................... 369
3. The Ascent of GPOs ................................................................. 369
4. GPO Behavior and the Legal Environment ................................. 373
5. Challenges to GPO Sustainability & the Industry Response ....... 378

BRUYLANT
Detailed Table of Contents

Discussion and Conclusion ................................................................. 384

Chapter 4. Brief notes on tenderer requirements in Italy
Anna Romeo ........................................................................................................ 387

1. The peremptory of causes of exclusion ........................................... 387
2. The professional morality and previous offences for crimes .......... 388
3. The absence of precedents of involvement of economic operators in organised crime .................................... 391
4. The regularity of deductions ............................................................ 393
5. Conclusions ................................................................................. 395

Chapter 5. Brief notes on the role of “protocols of legality” in Italy
Loredana Gianni ............................................................................................. 397

1. Introduction .................................................................................. 397
2. A new legal framework against corruption .................................. 397
3. The principal authorities involved in the anti-corruption framework .................................................. 398
4. The (three-year) plan for the prevention of corruption ................. 401
5. The key role of transparency ........................................................... 401
6. The guarantee of impartiality of public officers ......................... 403
7. Public contracts and agreements against corruption ................... 404
   7.1. The Coordinating Committee ................................................. 405
8. The experience of the Abruzzi ....................................................... 407
9. Protocols of legality and anti-Mafia reports ................................. 408

Detailed table of contents ......................................................................... 413